

From the 688i Strategy Guide:

Continuation of the Jane's Defense Weekly report:

The Situation on the Korean Peninsula continues to deteriorate. International inspections of North Korean nuclear facilities are being turned away. Border skirmishes with the South are frequent. Guerilla-style attacks have been made against key South Korean installations. These are believed to be the work of North Korean Special Forces, employing an unknown means of insertion. This would be an obvious prelude to all out war.

In other news, the Russian Government may be on the verge of collapse. While the hardline leader Chernyy failed in a bid to unseat the Russian president, he still has wide support from within the Russian military, especially in the Russian Far East provinces. Outright rebellion seems inevitable.
